"Any kind of discrimination and distinction between citizens of Afghanistan shall be forbidden. The citizens of Afghanistan, man and woman, have equal rights and duties before the law."

Article 22 of the Afghan Constitution

Our constitution binds us, the Afghan citizens, in reinforcing networks of rights and obligations. Reaffirming our commitment to the values and obligations of our sacred faith of Islam, chapter 2 not only enumerates the fundamental rights of the citizens but makes the state into the agency for realization of these universal rights. Our National Action Plan for meeting our commitments under UN Resolution 1325 is, therefore, a mechanism for ensuring the realization of the constitutional rights of Afghan women.

Women, most likely, constitute the majority of the country, as prolonged conflict has extracted a heavy toll from the men. Like the youth and the poor, two other numerical majorities of our society, our women are a political and economic minority. Transforming the lives of our women, youth and the poor through creation of equality of opportunity is they key objective of the Government of National Unity.

Bringing lasting change to the lives of our women is the hardest of our challenges. We must simultaneously confront the challenges emanating from our poverty, overcome the legacy of prolonged conflict, and build societal consensus on a comprehensive vision and a robust action program to ensure the protection and participation of our women.

Understanding the place of women during the dawn of Islam, the role of women in the shaping of Islamic civilization, and the conditions of women prior to the April coup of 1978 are essential to the formation and dissemination of a discourse, policy, and practice that meet the test of sustainable and steady transformation. As Islam provides the warp and woof of our social and political fabric, all stakeholders must strive to find common ground within the universal and encompassing message of our civilization. Our Ulama and our gender activists, whether men or women, have a historic opportunity to pioneer new approaches and mechanisms to work together. Cultures have continuity, because the past is not only made present today but provides the psychological assurance that the past will be present in the future. As cultures are continuous arguments among its bearers within constitutive rules, we make and change history and categories of understanding by fostering tolerance and empathy for diversity of perspectives and points of view of stakeholders.

Using the occasion of the National Action Plan to meet our national obligations under Resolution 1325, I congratulate our colleagues on a job well done. The way to truly honor their labor of love, however, is to use this action plan as a platform for a national discussion to achieve the aspirations of our constitution. As my first constitutional duty is to uphold the constitution, I pledge the wholehearted commitment of the government to realize the lofty vision of citizenship for all of our people, especially our women.

Mohammad Ashraf Ghani
President of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan

1. BACKGROUND

On October 31st 2000, the United Nations Security Council (UNSC) adopted the historic Resolution 1325 (UNSCR 1325) on Women, Peace, and Security. The adoption of UNSCR 1325 was the validation of over 20 years of advocacy by women peace activists and women's organizations globally and it had no precedence before as it recognized that women's increased participation in all decision-making on peace and security related issues, as well as an end to conflict-related sexual violence.

The Resolution stresses the importance of increasing women's participation in the prevention, management, and resolution of conflict as well as all matters related to peace and security.

UNSCR 1325 was adopted under Chapter VII of the UN Charter, which effectively makes it international law, with obligatory responsibility for implementation for all UN member states. UNSCR 1325 builds on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), and the Beijing Platform for Action. UNSCR 1325 is also reinforced by six subsequent resolutions adopted by the Security Council: UNSCR 1820, UNSCR 1888, UNSCR 1889, UNSCR 1960, UNSCR 2106, and UNSCR 2122. Together they comprise the Women, Peace, and Security Agenda.

As a UN Member State, Afghanistan is committed to observing the principles of the UN Charter, international treaties it has signed, and UNSCRs, particularly those on women's rights. The Government of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, therefore, intends to take practical steps in order to adhere to its women's rights obligations, and contributing to the maintenance of peace and security. To this end and in order to implement UNSCR 1325, the Government of Afghanistan has developed this National Action Plan.

2. INTRODUCTION

The Afghanistan's National Action Plan (NAP) on UNSCR 1325 women, peace and security is developed to address the challenges women faced in the aftermath of war and conflict in Afghanistan. The best tool for realizing the objectives of the above-mentioned resolutions is Afghanistan's National Action Plan, which aims to increase women's participation in peace processes and the security sector as well as address issues around protection and relief and recovery services for women. Thus, the NAP, is important because in any post conflict society the development of the country depends on men and women. Men and women must possess equal access to opportunities and resources to achieve this goal. To this end and in order to implement UNSCR 1325, the Government of Afghanistan has developed this National Action Plan to achieve the following:

- Participation of women in the decision making and executive levels of the Civil Service, Security and Peace and Reintegration;
- Women's active participation in national and provincial elections;
- Women's access to effective, active and accountable justice system;

- Health and psychosocial support for survivors of sexual and domestic violence throughout Afghanistan;
- Protection of women from all types of violence and discrimination;
- Provision of financial resources for activities related to women in emergency;
- Implementation of IDPs policy provisions related to UNSCR 1325;
- Put an end to impunity for violence against women (VAW) and related crimes;
- Engage boys and men in fighting Violence Against Women;
- Support and provide capacity building for civil society (particularly women's organizations) on UNSCR 1325 and women, peace, and security;
- Increase economic security for vulnerable women through increased employment opportunities;
- Increase access to education and higher education for girls and women, particularly for the internally displaced persons and returnees;

Impact of Armed Conflict on Women

Women have experienced tremendous upheaval throughout the history of Afghanistan and have been forced to bear the brunt of over three decades of conflict and insecurity. Women's human right deteriorated to unprecedented levels during the conflicts and war as they were denied their basic rights, including access to education, healthcare, and employment. After the collapse of the Taliban regime, women made a number of gains. Nevertheless, much remains to be done to realize women's full and equal rights. Due to more than 3 decades of war, in order to support women below are some of the major areas that require focused attention:

- Women are vulnerable to sexual violence, including: rape, sexual harassment, trafficking, forced prostitution, and forced marriages.
- In remote areas, women lack access to justices
- As a result of the armed conflict and the marginalization of women in society at large, women lack proper access to healthcare services, education, and employment opportunities.
- As a result, illiteracy and unemployment rates are highest among women, and Afghanistan suffers from a significant maternal mortality rate. Internally displaced women and women living in conflict-affected communities are particularly vulnerable to insecurity.

3. CONSTITUTIONAL AND LEGAL PROVISIONS RELATED TO WOMEN, PEACE, AND SECURITY

Prior to the adoption of this NAP, the Government of Afghanistan included provisions related to Women, Peace and Security in national legislation, government policies, and strategies and structures created to address WPS related issues. These provisions and structures are complementary to the NAP and should be viewed as tools for implementation of UNSCR 1325 in Afghanistan.

Constitutional Provisions

Article 22 of the Afghan Constitution states: "Any kind of discrimination and distinction between citizens of Afghanistan shall be forbidden. The citizens of Afghanistan, man and woman, have equal rights and duties before the law." This Article is the foundation for incorporating principles of gender equality and non-discrimination in government policies and initiatives. Women's right to vote and representation in the National Assembly is enshrined in the 1964 Constitution. These rights were strengthened in 2004 with the new Constitution that set the 26 percent quota of seats for women in the Lower House (Wolesi Jirga) and 17 percent in the Upper House (Meshrano Jirga). Following the 2010 elections, Afghan women represented 27.7% of the Wolesi Jirga.

Articles No 43, 44, 53, and 54 of the Afghan Constitution articulate provisions on education, healthcare, welfare, and employment services for women. These articles ensure women's access to education, healthcare, and employment in Afghanistan, which are pre-conditions for their meaningful political participation as well as an important component of the relief and recovery.

Legal Provisions

The laws of Afghanistan guarantee the protection of women's right and freedom, and GIRoA is thereby legally bound to protect women against violence. In 2009 the Elimination of Violence against Women (EVAW) Law was adopted, which lists 22 offences including forced marriage and rape. In an attempt to strengthen the legal provisions and structures to eliminate violence against women and increase women's participation, the GIRoA has taken the following significant steps:

- Adoption of the EVAW Law;
- Amendment of some of the provisions in the Civil Servants Law to promote women's right;
- Development of the Family Law;
- Development of procedures to prevent discrimination;
- Development of Shelter Regulations, and;
- Paragraph 32 of Presidential Decree No 45: On Elimination of Violence against Women.

4. POLICIES AND STRUCTURES RELATED TO WOMEN, PEACE AND SECURITY

A number of government policies relates to women, peace, and security are complementary to the NAP. One of such policy is the National Action Plan for the Women of Afghanistan (NAPWA), which is in effect from 2008-2018. NAPWA, which was endorsed by the Ministers' Council, serves as the government's main instrument for implementing policies and commitments on women's empowerment and gender equality. It is a multi-sectorial plan emphasizing access to education and healthcare services, economic security, political participation, as well as the elimination of violence against women. NAPWA also commits the Afghan Government to increase women's representation in the civil service to 30 percent.

Other relevant policy frameworks include:

- The Afghanistan National Development Strategy (ANDS), which includes gender equality as a major cross-cutting issue;
- The Afghanistan Compact (2006) and the Tokyo Mutual Accountability Framework (TMAF, 2012), which are among the key development documents that set out policies, outcomes, and benchmarks for accountability on the progress of Afghan women;
- The South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC), established in 1985, which includes gender initiatives;
- CEDAW, which Afghanistan signed in 1980 and ratified without reservation in 2003;
- The Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, which was adopted at the fourth Global Women's Conference in Beijing in 1995, emphasizes on the significant measures needed to improve the status of women, and;
- Strategy of the Ministries of Interior and National Defense, currently being revised to attain a minimum of 20 percent increase in women's representation in their respective ministries over the next ten years. Through its Strategic Objectives Plan (2010-2014), the Ministry of Interior has committed itself to creating opportunities for women within the police force.

National Structures

In order to enforce provisions made in the Constitution, legislations, and the various policies and action plans, a number of national structures have been established. These include: the Ministry of Women's Affairs (MoWA), Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, family courts, the EVAW Commissions in the center and provinces, and the Commission on Eliminating Sexual Abuse of Women and Children. There is also a special EVAW Law Prosecution Unit in the Attorney General's Office that investigates and prosecutes cases of violence against women, with similar units formed at the provincial level. The Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission (AIHRC) was established in 2002 with the purpose of promoting, protecting, and monitoring human rights and investigating human rights abuses.

Another development is that provincial headquarters and large districts have established Family Response Units (FRUs) staffed with policewomen. Since 2013, 201 FRUs are up and running, with 17 units in Kabul and 184 units in the provinces. Additionally during the London Conference (2014) the new government reaffirmed its commitment to implementation of UNSCR 1325.

WOMEN'S PARTICIPATION IN THE PEACE PROCESS

Despite the challenges facing Afghanistan, the status of women has improved since 2001. While there remains more to be achieved, increased access to education, healthcare, justice, employment, freedom of expression, and other basic rights has made it possible for Afghan women to participate more fully in public and political life. However, they still remain to a large extent excluded from social and political life, and decision-making pertaining to their own security and well-being. Accordingly, women's participation in official peace building initiatives, the peace process, and security sector reform has been limited.

One of the fundamental structures established by GIRoA to facilitate the peace process is the High Peace Council (HPC), comprised of 70 members, of which nine are women. Seventy-one women are also active in the Provincial Peace Committees and Secretariats across 33 provinces. As a result of efforts of the High Peace Council and its Provincial Peace Committees, the participation of women in peace building efforts is recognized as a prerequisite for peace and reconstruction across the country, which is of crucial importance. The Afghan Government is committed to ensuring women's representation at all levels of decision-making, with particular focus on women's role in the peace process in 34 provinces and acknowledges that durable peace and stability in Afghanistan requires the participation of women in political and social life.

This is despite the fact that there are increased numbers of women in the police, military, civil service but still not enough in order to respond to emerging needs of women. Women in the security sector is an encouraging force for more women to join the security forces.

The GIRoA also is determined to increase women's participation in the security sector by eliminating significant obstacles such as improper traditions, bias, and insecurity and developing more protective policies for women. The Government will implement and monitor reforms and capacity-building programs in the governance, justice, and security sectors in order to incorporate a gender responsive approach based on women's needs. These efforts will lead to the establishment of policy and legal frameworks that protect women who participate in conflict resolution, and strengthen their role at the negotiating table and in the security sector.

5. NATIONAL ACTION PLAN ON 1325 AND ITS STRATEGIC PRIORITIES

The UNSCR 1325 and the Women, Peace and Security Agenda is relevant to the current Afghan context, particularly in the state building and transitional process, women's empowerment and active political participation is of crucial importance.

Strategic Priorities and Objectives of the NAP

1- Participation

UNSCR 1325 seeks to increase the political participation of women at all levels of decision-making related to peace, security and civil service. The Government of Afghanistan has prioritized the political participation of women and aims to ensure their participation through the following provisions in the NAP:

- Increase effective participation of women in the decision-making and executive levels of the Civil Service;
- Women's active and effective participation in leadership positions of security agencies;
- Ensuring women's effective participation in the peace process;
- Encouraging women's meaningful participation in the drafting of strategies and policies on peace and security;
- Strengthening women's active participation in elections.

2- Protection

Women are vulnerable to various types of violence in conflict and post-conflict societies such as: threats, intimidation, violent attacks, rape, trafficking, and forced marriages. UNSCR 1325 recognizes that women are particularly vulnerable to sexual violence during conflict and post-conflict situations and calls for their protection. In recognition of the scale of this issue in Afghanistan, GIRoA aims to ensure the protection of women through the following provisions in the NAP:

- The protection of women from all forms of violence and discrimination through the enforcement, monitoring and amendment of existing laws and development of new laws and policies;
- Women's human rights are promoted through gender mainstreaming of laws, policies, and institutional reforms;
- Providing for enabling environment for women to have access to justice through their effective participation in the judiciary.
- The protection of women from all forms of violence through awareness raising and public outreach;
- Health, psychological, and social support is available for survivors of violence throughout Afghanistan;
- Special measures are in place ensuring women's protection from sexual violence;

3- Prevention

UNSCR 1325 highlights the importance of preventing sexual violence against women, prior to it occurring or in the early stages by adopting special measures. GIRoA firmly believes that the prevention of violence against women is one of the best ways to effectively ensure women's rights and political participation and lists the following related objectives in the NAP:

- Prevention of violence against women;
- The elimination of the culture of impunity surrounding violence against women;
- Strengthen the role of women in the security sector and judicial structures;
- Gender-related reforms in the security and justice sector;
- Involve men and boys in the fight against all forms of violence against women;
- Increase awareness among women of their rights and their role in preventing violence and resolving conflict.

4- Relief and Recovery

Lack of adequate economic resources for women in conflict and post-conflict situations is a major challenge to providing access to education and healthcare services. UNSCR 1325 calls for the creation of funding mechanisms, economic development opportunities, and the provision of relief and recovery services (e.g. services for survivors of violence and equal distribution of resources between men and women). UNSCR 1325 also specifically addresses women's access to aid distribution mechanisms and services, including those related to their distinct needs.

GIRoA is committed to providing relief and recovery services to women from/within conflict-affected communities, IDPs, and survivors of violence, through the following objectives in the NAP:

- Provision of relief and recovery services for women affected by conflict, IDPs and women survivors of violence;
- Increasing rural women's economic security through increased employment opportunities;
- The social and economic needs of women are considered in the design, implementation, and evaluation of relief and recovery programs;
- Girls and women's increased access to education, healthcare services, and employment, particularly for refugees, the internally displaced, and returnees
- The implementation of the IDP Policy provisions related to UNSCR 1325.

6. IMPLEMENTATION MECHANISM

1. Implementation Plan

GIRoA acknowledges the need for a detailed implementation plan to ensure the successful implementation of the NAP. Hence, a separate implementation plan based on the matrices is set to be developed to clarify the responsibilities of the lead and supporting agencies during the implementation of phase 1 (2015-2018) and the steps to be taken in terms of coordination, monitoring and evaluation and financing of the NAP.

The NAP spans over two phases of four year period each, and the actions in the matrix section of the NAP are linked to specific timeframes. The phase one will cover 2015-2018 and phase two will cover 2019-2022. For successful implementation of the NAP it will be crucial for all the implementing agencies and the involved stakeholders to keep the deadlines set. The activities will be prioritized by the lead and supporting agencies and will be specified in the relevant implementation plans of the agencies.

2. Implementing Agencies

A clear division of responsibilities between different ministries and agencies is important to avoid confusion. For this purpose, the implementing agencies have been divided into two categories: 1) lead implementing agencies, and 2) supporting agencies.

The NAP is a government policy and a reflection of GIRoA's commitments with regards to the implementation of UNSCR 1325. Lead implementing agencies are government agencies, ministries, structures, and institutions, while civil society, media and the private sector play an important role as the supporting agencies.

3. Reporting and Accountability

All lead and supporting implementing agencies will be responsible for reporting on their assigned activities on an annual basis to the DHRWIA-MoFA. The DHRWIA will compile the reports and submit them to the Steering Committee for approval. After approving the report, the Steering Committee will submit the final report to the President Office, the National Assembly and the international community. The annual reporting will address: the extent of activities implemented, financing allocated, disbursed and spent, progress made, challenges encountered, and suggestions to improve the implementation.

The annual reporting mechanism, a midterm and final review will be conducted by a team of experts. To ensure uniform and consistent reporting of high quality, templates are designed for the annual reporting, and all focal points in the lead agencies responsible for collecting the data and writing the reports will be given training. The training will focus on how to use the templates and indicators, data collection, and how to analyze and present the data collected.

In order to ensure effective implementation and reporting of the NAP, the annual reports as well as the midterm review and final review will be published on MoFA's website.

GIRoA recognizes the importance of strong accountability mechanisms in order to achieve successful implementation of the NAP. The annual reporting by the lead agencies and the independent midterm and final review will serve this purpose and will ensure that all the agencies are implementing the activities for which they are the lead implementing actors.

The matrices outlining the activities of the NAP have been designed to ensure that there is no uncertainty about which agencies are responsible for implementation and reporting. The annual reporting by the lead agencies will be prepared on the basis of indicators, templates, activities and their specific responsibilities. The annual reporting by the lead agencies and the independent midterm and final review will respond to the requirements of the principle of transparency that the GIRoA requires in order to achieve successful implementation of the NAP.

Strong accountability mechanisms and monitoring of the NAP implementation are dependent on broad ownership, transparency, political will and accountability at the highest levels of government.

7. MONITORING & EVALUATION

GIRoA recognizes the need for a comprehensive monitoring and evaluation mechanism to ensure effective implementation of the NAP. Therefore, a separate Monitoring and Evaluation (M&E) Plan is designed, which includes annual monitoring, mid-term (after two years) and final review (Evaluation) in the fourth year. The M&E Plan will include tracking and monitoring of financing for the NAP to ensure transparent and effective implementation, for which the Steering Committee is responsible. The GIRoA recognizes the important role of civil society as an independent oversight body for the successful implementation of the NAP.

8. COOPERATION AND PARTNERSHIPS

Successful implementation of the NAP on UNSCR 1325 requires close cooperation between the Government of Afghanistan, civil society, conflict affected communities, and the international community. GIRoA bears overall responsibility for the implementation of the NAP through the agencies mentioned in the implementing agencies matrix.

The legitimacy of the NAP and effective implementation relies on the support of the women of Afghanistan and those specifically affected by the NAP, including female survivors of sexual violence, female IDPs and returnees, female civil servants, women in the security sector, politicians, and activists etc.

Civil society organizations who work on UNSCR 1325 and related issues also play an important role in the implementation of the NAP, as supporting agencies and implementing partners. They can also function as an important watchdog; conducting advocacy and awareness raising, and producing shadow reports. GIRoA is committed to ensuring that necessary resources are available for capacity building of civil society.

The private sector should be an important partner for the implementation of the NAP, particularly for activities related to relief and recovery and creating employment opportunities for women. Successful implementation of the NAP also requires extensive awareness raising and public outreach; hence private and state owned media outlets (TV, radio, newspapers etc.) across the country will play an important role.

Furthermore, the international community, donors, and international organizations who have supported the development of the NAP will continue to be important partners for the implementation phase, providing technical and financial assistance.

9. RISKS AND MITIGATION MECHANISMS

Potential Risk/Problem	Measures to Address the Risk/Problem
1) Deterioration of the security situation in some or all parts of the country.	In the event of a deterioration of the security situation it is important to adapt the implementation of the activities to avoid the wasting of resources. Implementation of new activities in not yet covered areas should be limited or slowed down and efforts should be increased to support already on-going activities.
2) Lack of financial	When budgeting/costing the NAP, the Steering Committee should

resources to bear the cost of NAP implementation.	encourage national and international donors to commit to funding for the duration of the NAP. Throughout the course of implementation attention should be focused on seeking and raising funds from multiple national and international sources. The Steering Committee should also work to increase the available funds to the NAP through the annual national government budget. The budget should also contain a contingency plan, and some margins for each expected budget line that will be used when limitations in funding occur. The NAP budget should be revised on an annual basis if needed and necessary adjustments should be made.
3) The agencies responsible for the implementation of the NAP lack sufficient capacity and technical skills to successfully implement the activities.	The Steering Committee, the Coordination Committee, (ANNEX 2) and the agencies focal points should invest time and resources in training, capacity building, technical support and creating an enabling environment for the implementing agencies. The Steering Committee and Coordination Committee should support the agencies in resolving any challenges and ambiguities such as with other agencies, and councils during the NAP implementation. The annual reports should include an analysis of the capacity and technical skills and suggestions for improvements.
4) Some of the actions in the NAP are challenged at the provincial levels.	Preventive measures should include the creation of broad ownership on the national and provincial level through awareness raising and advocacy initiatives. Dialogue between the agencies and ministries in Kabul and their provincial branches with provincial governments throughout the implementation phase will be important to avoid confusion or lack of understanding of the obligation to implement the activities in the NAP. In case of any problems governors can function as a mediators to resolve issues.
5) One or a number of the implementing agencies does not deliver annual reports of high quality on time.	At the beginning of the implementation phase the Steering Committee and the Coordination Committee should ensure that all the focal points in the lead agencies are aware of their responsibility to implement the NAP. To ensure easy and uniformed annual reporting templates will be

	given to all lead agencies. All the focal points in the lead agencies will also receive training on how to use the templates and the indicators and how to collect and analyze the data for the reports. If the training provided is not enough to ensure timely reporting of high quality or if focal points change after the training, additional training and technical support should be provided. If reports are lacking they should be edited and suggestions for improvements should be made by the NAP Coordinator/M&E Officer and then returned to the focal points for completion. If capacity building initiatives and technical support are not enough to ensure timely reporting of high quality, the Steering Committee will hold the responsible agencies accountable for not delivering their reports on time.
6) Coordination between the lead agencies and supporting agencies for the implementation is lacking.	An implementation plan with a mechanism for coordination of lead and supportive agencies which can be used for the implementation of each activity in the NAP is developed and distributed to all the implementing agencies. If there are any issues with the coordination it should be included in the annual reports to DHRWIA of MoFA, whereby the Steering Committee will adopt measures to resolve the issues.
